Notice from The New-York Evening Mirror.

"The volume is a profoundly interesting life-memorial of one of the most active, earnest, elequent and sincerely religious spirits of his age and generation. Spencer H. Cone was a very remarkable man and from a perusal of his life we are convinced that selfshness and narrow-mindedness had no place in his nature. He appears to us to have been a model of earnestness, sincerity, activity, and intelligence."

THE VERDICT OF GOOD JUDGES.

Says Prestice's Louisville Louisville Journal: "The romance of confury life was never taken off more resistlessly or genially than in these lively papers. They are a merry, regunsh protest against the whole world of rural literature, from the klyle and bucolics of Theoritus down to the charming pastoral tales of Alice Carey. They will be read by everbody with an exquisite relish. The humor of Mr. Cozzens, though rarely flashing into wit, is sustained and spirited and continually flows over sands of golden sense. Undoubtedly he is destined to become one of our most popular writers."

Says The Buffall Express, in an appreciative leader: "The bent of the papers is toward the sasirical, but so tempered by good humor is the blade of the operator, that not the most sensitive reader can find a line whereon to base a feeling of anger or an excuse for complaint. Like many of the humorous papers of Irving, those of 'Systrowaras' contain a mors' value, reatier than that conferred by the richness of style or elegance of diction. And, like the works of that suthor, too, they frequently exhibit bits of genuine pathos and hearty sentiment, so natural as to call up the tea "sympathy, even while the lip curves under the spell of their exquisite deolery."

"Mr. Correns's fun is not of the rollicking sort; it is quiet and refined, calling for no bolsterous recognition, but irresistably appealing to the immost sense of humor in the reader. Yet Mr. Irving remarked, within a short time, that he had read nothing in many years over which he had so heartily laughed, as over the imaginary misfortunes of the Sparnwegrass family. Indeed, that Nestor of American literature places a very high heatimate upon the talent of Mr. Cozzens, and, as we personally know, spoke of him to Mr. Theckeray as the most promising of young American writers."

Says The Boston Transcript: "Beneath their genial humor these ques a vein of common is American writers " ys The Boston Transcript: "Beneath their genial humor r suns a vein of common sense, which is as rare as it is ant. The pictures of rural life are charming, and must have y admirers. The volume is published in excellent style—as rds paper, type and illustrations. It is dedicated to the Fracerick W. Shelton, author of 'Letters from up the r, and 'one of the gentlest of humorists.' The SparrowPapers will have a wide sale, 'if men are as they have spirited writing in the world."

Says The New-Haven Pelladium: "They have never been equated in American literature for genial humor, classic polish and gentlemanly refinement, and Lamb alone of English writers, in our opition, has surpassed them."

Says The N. Y. Observer: "Nothing more genial in the way of humor have we read in many a day than these papers. They have been the life of Putnam's Magazine, and we welcome them now in a neat volume. Read them, reader, and enjoy these mirrl- provoking scenes."

Says The Savanneh (i.e.) News, in a column notice: "Mr. Cozzens is without doubt one of the most irresistible humorists of the day, an opinion in which we feel perfectly confident we will be sustained by all who may have the fortune to partake of his Sparrowgrass. No one can fail to enjoy the aithor's experiences in the country. The narrative is told with a naivete perfectly refreshing, and which is underliad with a current of great humor which is only the more defectable for its unobtrusiveness."

suase. Then he is mirthful without being forcedly witty, observant without being proxy, tastfed without being insipid, astirical without being proxy, tastfed without being insipid, astirical without being blitter, reformatory without being head-strong, instructional without being disactic, and, in feet, a model of that golden medium which in literature, as in all things else, is the acme of perfection. The reader will glow under its humer, sadden under its pathos, and turn the last leaf with regret; but he will be wieer, happier and better, for having read the 'Sparrowerse's Papers.'"

" A treasury of real intellectual pleasure and profit!" SALAD FOR THE SOCIAL-

Some idea of the great merit of this work may be formed

"My hearty thanks for a Salad which is peculiarly to my taste, and which I have relished with somewhat of the curious palate of a literary epicure. I am happy to see that the work meets with general acceptance and applause."

From The London Morning Chronicle.

"'Our Epicure' is a literary goesip of the pleasantest sort.
He has read much, and noted his reading; read with his mind awake, and with his heart open to the appeals of beauty."

From The London Morning Herald.

"Every chapter of this entertaining book would tempt a man to seek solitude for the pleasure of enjoying the intellectual treat."

From The London Globs.

From The New-York Express.

"Every page is rich with rare and well digested thought—expressed after a fashion that strikes us as both original and elegant."

From The Courier and Enquire " A bonne bouche for a quiet hour's enjoyment. It is a bo which ignorant men may read, and appear learned upon the fruits of the author's labor. Such a book must needs be popular."

Commercial, Lumbering and Mining Operations.

By Jacon Ferris.

In one volume, with a new and accurate Map, embracing each of the above States and Territories, and numerous Hinstitutions. About 352 pp. 12mo. cloth. Price $1.25.

THE GREAT WEST is emphatically the Book for the business, the geteral reader and the pleasure traveler, as it accurately delimentes the localities in which capital and enterprise can most interested. It is the book for those who have homes, or friends, or interests in the West, and is, therefore, interesting to all, as the West is now intimately connected by business interests or by family ties with every portion of the sivilized world.

This book also supplies a great deficiency in our Literature.

This book also supplies a great deficiency in our Literature. Most other books upon the West are confined to some limited rates of country, and are filled either with adventures across the Plains and over the Mountains, or with details of mere local interest. But this takes a comprehensive view of The WHOLE WEST.

The Author possesses a rare experience of the West, having visited almost every part of it this side of the Rocky Mountains, to obtain a knowledge of the country, the progress of settlements, and the manners and customs of the people.

READ THE FOLLOWING NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"Jewels and peeris of native humor fall facilely from the pen of this merry writer. He even brings to light an assortment of fresh puns, which will rejoice the ears of many in the prevailing dearth of good things in that line."

"This book throughout spakles with gens of true humor. If a person feels dejected and care-worn, a few pages of these remarkable adventures will shorten his countenance by one half."

[Christian Freeman, Boston.

"A lively, chatty work, overflowing with humor."

"The author has not only the propensity, but the taleut to make fun out of everything. It may be profitably recommended to that numerous and forlors class known as dyspeptics."

"The author is one of those wide-awake, rollicking fellows who see everything from the laughable side. He has made it too dangerous to trust weak buttons with. We shall never again trust our explosiveness with that Yankee. We have raised the house and risked our ribs once-wellare not do it again."

"Full of wit and mirth—as welcome as one hour of unashine after a long storm. Full of amusement, genial and warm sentiments."

"The suther plays on words as if he could not help it. Its humor is subdued and quiet, but not less telling. Is much in advance of "The Stray Yankee has tickled the diaphragms and driven away the bines of many a reader. The above delicious feast of wit, fun, satire and relicking adventure, is nearly ready. Since Dickens twenty years ago electrified the world with his "Pickwick Papers," there has been no work like the adventures of SOAPEY SPONGE. The anthor has in a truly original manner made a sporting man the chief actor in a series of scenes unrivaled for their perfect acminuteness of detail. The obstactors are drawn by a master hand, and are perfectly original—not mere copies, exaggerations tive is, perhaps, Mr. Sponge's courtship of the beautiful and brave Lucy Glitters, one of the most delightful of hereines

This treatise on the detection of counterfeit, altered and spanious Bank notes is now acknowledged to be the most perfect work on the subject that has ever appeared, and one which will materisily check the traffic in counterfeiting.

"Beyond question the best work of this kind that we have ever seen. No trader should be without it. Its cost will be saved twenty times oves."

"This is a valuable work, based upon correct principles, and we are confident, if every business man in the community had a copy of it, counterfeiting would be a thing of the past."

"A good idea, and will also be useful to Brokers and Cashiars of country Banks."
